Forever float that standard sheet—
Where breathes the foe but falls before us;
With Freedom's soil beneath our feet,
And Freedom's banner streaming o'er us!

The News.

The news is important to-day. Lee has crossed the Rappahannock and is advancing towards Harper's Ferry, a portion of his cavalry having appeared between that place and Winchester. Hooker has broken up his camp near Fredericksburg and is marching north. The President has called out 100,000 six months' troops in Pennsylvania, Maryland and Ohio.

The latest date from Vicksburg is the 10th. Johnston is gathering his forces. Otherwise the situation remains unchanged.

Military and Civil Law.

When we asserted that the military power of the government was supreme over all matters pertaining to the war, and that it had a right to exercise its authority according to its own judgment of what was necessary to suppress rebellion in every part of the country, some timid old ladies in pantaloons were startled. The editor of the Monitor has not yet recovered the serenity of his mind. He was horror-struck at the revolutionary radicalism of the Gazette, and evidently made up his mind that unless he came to the rescue the country was done for. We find that what we said was good law, although we at the time knew only that it was sound reason.

We invite the Monitor to listen to Judge Taney, of the United States court, who, in delivering the opinion of the court in the case of Luther vs. Borden, (7th How.) said, in speaking of the exercise of arbitrary military power of military officers in times of war or insurrection, that

"The power is essential to the existence of every government—essential to the preservation of order and free institutions—and is as necessary to the states of this Union as to any other government."

The officers engaged in its military service, might lawfully arrest any one, who, from the information before them, had reasonable grounds to believe was engaged in the insurrection; and might order a house to be forcibly entered and searched, when there were reasonable grounds for supposing he might be there concealed. Without the power to do this, martial law would be mere guard, and rather encourage an attack than repel it."

In the same opinion, the court, in speaking of the power of the President to decide whether the exigency exists authorizing him to call out the militia to put down a rebellion, says:

"If it could, (that is, if the court could revise,) then it would become the duty of the court, (provided it came to the conclusion that the president had decided incorrectly,) to discharge those who were arrested or detained by the troops in the service of the United States, or the government which the President was endeavoring to maintain. If the judicial power extends so far, the government is in the constitution of the United States, (that is, of protecting them against insurrection,) is a guarantee of anarchy, not of order."

The court further says:

"It is said that this power in the President is dangerous to liberty and to the abuse of power. All power may be abused if placed in unworthy hands. But it would be difficult, we think, to point out any other hands in which this power would be more safe, and, at the same time, equally effectual. When the citizens of the same state are in arms against each other, and the constituted authorities unable to execute the laws, the intervention of the United States must be prompt, or it is of little value."

But that is not the strongest authority. In the case of Martin vs. State, 12 Wheaton, p. 29, the court says:

"Is the President (governor) the sole and exclusive judge whether the exigency has arisen, or is it to be considered as an open question, upon which every officer to whom the orders of the President are addressed may decide for himself, and equally open to be contested by every militia man who shall refuse to obey the orders of the President? We are all of the opinion that the authority to decide whether the exigency has arisen, belongs exclusively to the President, and that his decision is conclusive upon all other persons. We think that this construction necessarily results from the nature of the power itself, and from the manifest object contemplated by the act of congress. The power itself is to be exercised upon sudden emergencies, upon great occasions of state, and under circumstances which may be vital to the existence of the Union. A prompt and unhesitating obedience to orders is indispensable to the complete attainment of the object."

Now, it may be said that these cases only related to regions where actual war exists, and that, too, where martial law had been proclaimed. Now, it is a most curious and extraordinary fact, that martial law exists to-day over this entire Union, and that, too, by the act of the President of the United States. On the 24th of September, 1862, the President issued the following proclamation:

SEPTEMBER 24, 1862.

WHEREAS, It has become necessary to call into service not only volunteers, but also portions of the militia of the states; and in order to suppress the insurrection existing in the United States, and disloyal persons are not adequately restrained by the ordinary processes of law from hindering this measure, and from giving aid and comfort, in various ways, to the insurrection; Now, therefore, be it ordered, that during the existing insurrection, and as a necessary means for suppressing the same, all rebels and insurgents, their aiders and abettors, within the United States, and all persons discouraging volunteer enlistments, resisting militia drafts, or guilty of any disloyal practice, affording aid and comfort to the rebels against the authority of the United States, shall be subject to martial law, and liable to trial and punishment by court martial or military commission. Second—That the writ of habeas corpus is suspended in respect to all persons arrested, or who are now, or hereafter, during the rebellion, shall be imprisoned on other places of confinement, by any military authority, or by the sentence of a court martial or military commission.

It is sufficiently plain how matters stand in regard to military and civil law. The military is paramount. In everything relating to war the civil law is dead. So say the supreme court, the President, and congress. The latter body said this when it authorized the President to suspend the writ of habeas corpus, although he undoubtedly had the power under the constitution without its permission, but having it, the argument is at an end.

Correspondence of the Daily Gazette.

From Gen. Rosecrans' Army.

SIGNAL CORPS, 20TH ARMY CORPS, MEMPHIS, TENN., June 7th, 1863.

Editors Gazette:—When I wrote you on the 4th inst., I expected before this time we would have been where the thick smoke of battle would shut out the light of day, but the powers that rule us seem to have ordered it otherwise. At any rate, we are still here and all quiet. The preparations to move—or what we took for such preparations—were nothing more or less than preparations to repel an intended and expected attack upon our lines by the rebels. The rebels have undoubtedly thought for some time that troops had been sent from here to reinforce Grant, and on the 4th they reconnoitered our whole line, to see whether or not we still kept up our whole front. One force advanced on the Middle road, but were met and driven back by the 4th regular cavalry. Our loss was one man killed and six wounded. Another force advanced on the Shelbyville road, and were met by Gen. Canby, of Gen. J. C. Davis' division, at Marshall's Knob, about four miles from here, and were repulsed handsomely. Another force advanced on the Salem road, but were met by Gen. Lytle's brigade, of Gen. Sheridan's division, and also sent back much faster than they came. The principal attack was made upon our small garrison at Franklin, by a large force led on by Forrest and Starnes. The cannonading was very plainly to be heard here while the fight lasted there, and at one time a report came from Nashville that our forces there had surrendered, but soon our fears were dispelled by more cheering reports. The enemy were handsomely repulsed there, and quite a number of prisoners taken.

The men who were captured by the rebels at the battle of Stones River have been exchanged, and are nearly all here again. It would do you good to see how happy these men look when they find themselves once more where they can shoulder the musket and go forth to give the enemy battle.

Refugees arrive from time to time, but not as plentifully as they did a few weeks ago. One family arrived to day from Shelbyville. The children bore small Union flags, and the parents seemed to feel joyed at being away from rebeldom.

On the 5th, Wm. A. Selkirk, who had been convicted of the murder of Adam Weaver, of Wilson county, was executed by hanging. I did not go to see the execution, but am told by those who went that the criminal asserted his innocence to the last, but notwithstanding that there is no doubt of his guilt. The son and daughter of the murdered man were near the platform, and the latter requested the privilege of adjusting the rope.

Our attention now is centered on Grant and Banks, and we almost dread to open the papers when they come, for fear there may be bad news for us.

The weather has been quite cool and rainy for some days and to-night there are strong indications of a storm. Our shelter tents stand the rain well. I hope you will bear of a move by us ere long.

J. M. KIMBALL.

P. S.—It is now morning of the 8th and as I am not well enough to be on duty I will write you a few more lines. The storm which began last night has passed quietly away, and it is now warm here. You can hardly realize the joy of the men here when Gen. Banks issued his order suppressing the "Chicago Times," and prohibiting the circulation of the "World" in his department, but that joyous feeling was more than equalled by the sorrow which the President's revoking order caused. If it was politic and right to transport Vallandigham beyond our lines and to hang rebel recruiting officers when found within our lines, then why is not it equally so to stop the mouth of a paper which does nothing week after week but pour forth a torrent of abuse and calumny against the government and its every measure to put down this rebellion? If those who are in favor of letting vile copperhead sheets pour forth their weekly and daily tirades of abuse against the brave men now under arms and in the field, would come and campaign for a couple of years they would be completely cured of their tenderheartedness.

We are truly sad to see what we term the spirit of gentleness in our government towards a set of cowardly and contemptible home ranging, back biting and damnable copperheads. You may think we are somewhat radical in our views, but two years in the army to help protect the lives, homes and interests of these same men who now abuse us is enough to make any one a radical. Is it not?

A few days since a rebel spy, one of the fairer sex, was caught here. She feigned insanity but forgot the part she was trying to perform and owned up. It is presumed she will be shot.

Ex-Governor Bashford has been appointed surveyor-general of Arizona.—Daily News.

A mistake. The appointee is Levi Bashford, a brother of Ex-Governor Ohio Bashford.—Wiscotin.

By the term loyalty, about which so much has been said and written for the past two or three years, we understand fidelity or faithfulness to the government under which we live, and which guarantees and yields us full protection in the enjoyment of all our constitutional rights and privileges. We understand by this term a cheerful and generous support of the legally constituted authorities of the land; an adherence to the measures which the President, as commander-in-chief of the army and navy, has adopted for the purpose of subduing the rebels who are straining every nerve for the breaking up of the Union. If not a full adherence to these measures, they must certainly be acquiesced in, to constitute anything like a valid claim to loyalty.

We have spoken above of our rights and privileges under the constitution. Some captious persons have been much in the habit of affirming that these rights have been invaded—that the President has disregarded the privileges of the citizen, and usurped powers not warranted by the constitution. It is a sufficient answer to this charge, to say in brief, that no loyal man has ever made any complaint on this score. Traitors only—or at least men of very questionable loyalty, have grumbled at the course of the administration, charging Mr. Lincoln with being a usurper and a tyrant. Of course

"No rogue ever felt the halter draw,
With good opinion of the law."

The man who is really true to his government has nothing to fear. He may criticize the President, or the cabinet, or the congress of the United States, or the generals in the field, so long as he occupies the standpoint of a patriot, and criticizes with a cool head, a sound judgment, and a warm heart, and no military edict will disturb him in the least. He need harbor no fear of an arbitrary arrest, imprisonment or banishment to the hell of rebeldom. He will be safe in his person and property. A calm and sober criticism of the administration and its agents is quite consistent with genuine loyalty. On this account no one has ever been harmed. Cavilling, carping, a determined and vindictive spirit of opposition to the administration in all its important war measures, are characteristic only of copperheads or sympathizers with treason.

There are different kinds of loyalty. We may specify several varieties, as follows: There is what we may call a technical loyalty. We mean by this that showed course of conduct, that carefully studied and carefully worded opposition, that could not well be construed into positive disloyalty. An individual may be at heart opposed to the President and his war measures, but by dint of sheer artfulness may avoid committing himself as an enemy, an avowed sympathizer with the traitorous hordes against which the government and all truly loyal men are contending. These technical loyalists, at the best, are but "artful dodgers," and will hardly command the respect of patriots now, or the confidence of the people when the war for the Union shall have been brought to a successful issue.

There is also what we may term an interested loyalty. The very substratum of this is selfishness. It would injure my business, says one of this class, to be understood as occupying a position hostile to the government in this trying emergency. Thus a constrained patriotism is exhibited at times, mainly because of the pecuniary advantages resulting from it.

There is a cowardly loyalty. Certain persons profess to be patriotic and loyal citizens, because they lack the courage necessary to display their true colors. Nearly allied to this is that cringing, sycophantic, hypocritical loyalty that sometimes manifests itself. Hypocrisy here is quite as detestable as that which vainly attempts to hide itself under the garb of religion.

There is, too, a whimpering loyalty. This is quite too common, and is as contemptible as any which we have mentioned in this article. I rather guess, says one, we shall have to give up to the rebels, after all. I don't see that we are making any progress, says another. In this way these whimpering loyalists are really contributing to the support of the rebel cause. Every discouraging word on the part of professed loyalists is a word of encouragement to the south through secession sympathizers at the north.

Compromising loyalty. No imaginable phase of loyalty is meaner than this. It says in effect, and has so said from the start, pray don't exasperate the rebels with bullets and bayonets; compromise with them; coax them back into the Union; promise them all they have ever asked, and a great deal more; give them ample assurance that we will guarantee all the black slaves—ay, all the white ones—that the chivalrous ambition, avarice, cupidity and lust of the slave-lords may demand; that we will consent to the re-opening of the slave trade; that we will vote them slave territory and slave states to their hearts' content; that we will indeed do anything that is mean, and low, and contemptible, and drivelling, if they will but consent to come back and be our masters once more! This is the sum and substance of compromising loyalty. We despise it. It is, if anything, more loathsome than the diabolical treason plotted by slaveholders against the life of the nation.

True Loyalty. This is neither of the technical, selfishly interested, cowardly, whimpering or compromising kind. It is just what we need—a loyalty that is unconditional, unflinching, unwavering. A loyalty fully pledged to the grand purpose of thwarting the designs of traitors and copperheads—of overcoming and putting down the rebellion—and, since such is the purpose of the government, of rooting out the cause of all the difficulty, which is slavery! True loyalists are those who stand by the government, and who will stand by it to the last, rendering all the assistance in their power for the final triumph of our arms and the restoration of the Union. True loyalists are those who, with uplifted hand and on bended knees, are willing and anxious to swear fealty to the government, pledging their earthly substance and their lives for the preservation of our national unity and the cause of universal freedom! They are among those who endorse fully the sentiment of the Catholic poet Faber:

"For right is right, does God is God;
And right the day must win;
To doubt would be disloyalty,
To falter would be sin!"

Last Night's Report.

MEMPHIS, June 12.

The steamer Fort Wayne, from Young's Point, arrived here to-day. She brought no later dates than the 8th inst. No guerrillas were seen on the way up.

The fight at Milliken's Bend Sunday last was a very sanguinary affair, much larger than at first reported. The rebels under McCulloch, 2,500 strong, advanced upon the federal forces, composed of three negro regiments and 23d Iowa volunteers. The rebels made a desperate charge at daylight. The negroes broke in confusion, but finding that their captured comrades were being slaughtered by the rebels, they rallied with great desperation, and drove the rebels back. The loss is heavy on both sides.

The guerrillas destroyed portions of the railroad track near Germantown, last night. The damage they did was slight, and will soon be repaired.

The rebel force in Northern Missouri has been sent to reinforce Gen. Johnston.

NASHVILLE, June 13.

The rebels made another attack on the Tennessee and 23d Iowa volunteers. The rebels made a desperate charge at daylight. The negroes broke in confusion, but finding that their captured comrades were being slaughtered by the rebels, they rallied with great desperation, and drove the rebels back. The loss is heavy on both sides.

The guerrillas destroyed portions of the railroad track near Germantown, last night. The damage they did was slight, and will soon be repaired.

An Enrolling Officer Shot.

Mr. John Douglas of the town of Lebanon, Dodge county, was shot and seriously wounded on Tuesday last, while pursuing his business as an enrolling officer for said town. The circumstances of the case, as we have learned from the attending physician, are as follows: Upon the Tuesday morning by three persons whom he had already enrolled, who stated to him that they were his friends, and wished some corrections made. They were also anxious in their inquiry as to what course he intended to take that day. He thought no more of this until later in the town, when he met the assassin of the town, who intended to shoot him in a mysterious manner, that his life was in danger. Mr. D. pressed him for some reason for such intimation but could get none. They then parted. Sometime in the afternoon, as Mr. Douglas was passing a piece of woods, he was fired upon from the underbrush, and brought to the ground, receiving a heavy charge of duck shot, thirty or forty in number, in his left side and shoulder. As he raised himself from the ground, he heard another discharge and a bullet as he thinks, struck his head. He went to a neighbor's house where he found a friend, and was carried home.

Mr. Douglas has always sustained an excellent reputation in his town, and believes that this attempt upon his life was simply for the reason of his connection with the enrolling business.

His wounds are severe but not regarded as dangerous. We understand that great excitement exists in that part of the county among loyal men, and several arrests have already been made. It has been rumored for some time that the copperheads in that town, and vicinity, were drilling to resist the draft. It is earnestly hoped that such a summary method of dealing with these men who have premeditated this cold blooded murder, will be adopted, that it will not be attempted again in this state. Those who are so clamorous for the constitution and the laws, ought to taste of their penalties.—Home League.

The Wisconsin learns that Mr. Douglas has since died.

This sad affair is one of the natural results of the course pursued by some of the democratic papers of this city and state, for the past year or more. Had they sustained the war, and helped to strengthen the hands of the government in its prosecution, as they should, the musket would never have been fired. Squirrels and dogs are much as they may, the "damning rod" is plain enough for any one to read, that it is a secessionist who committed this dastardly crime, and that he was encouraged to it by the teachings of his favorite newspapers. Whatever his party, however, or whoever he may be, we would that he could be strung up at once.

Mr. Stebbins is an earnest and interesting speaker and all the friends of Sabbath schools are cordially invited to be present.

Music and Fun.—It is necessary that we should have a little fun now and then, to break the monotony of every-day life, and we are promised something rich (at least we should judge so, from the flaming posters and varied programme offered us) by Sam Sharpley and his troupe of iron-clads, at Lappin's Hall, Wednesday evening.—This company come to us so well recommended that we do not hesitate to warrant our readers something above the usual standard of theatrical minstrelsy. It needs no puffing on our part to draw them a crowded house, as their reputation has already preceded them.

In Operation Again.—The woolen factory of F. Whitaker is being put in full operation and is now ready to do custom work. An advertisement will soon appear in our columns.

Watch Lost.—An open faced, silver, cylinder escapement watch was lost yesterday (Sunday) afternoon somewhere between Edward Connell's residence and the Catholic Church. A liberal reward will be paid for its return to this office. jel5d2d.

A money purse was left at Prof. Shaw's dancing rooms. The owner is requested to call for the same.

A glazier's diamond found in the street, and may be had at this office by proving property and paying for this advertisement. jel2d4f.

STATE SCHOOL MONEY.—The amount of school money to be distributed this year is $135,690, or 44 cents per scholar. The income of the fund is 15 per cent. larger this year than last; the apportionment, however, was 50 cents per scholar last year, owing to the fact that $32,000 of library money was included.

The Iron Platform, published by Wm. Orland Bourne, 112 William street, New York, is the organ of an association in that city, composed of prominent members of the democratic party, who are making a bold stand against the demoralizing influence of the infamous peace faction, and who are doing all in their power to infuse and promote a counter spirit of genuine patriotism among the people. Heretofore it has appeared monthly, but is to be established as a weekly organ of the people, embodying the purest statesmanship of the country, and giving an emphasized expression to the important revelations and views of reliable southern Union men. It is the best series of "tracts for the times" that has yet been produced. Single copies, 3 cents; $2 per hundred.

STATE PROTESTANT GENERAL'S OFFICE.—The headquarters of the Provost Marshal General for this state has been changed to Milwaukee. Lieut. Col. Lovell's reason for the change is probably to be nearer the localities of expected trouble about the draft, and to be in closer communication with General Pope, the commander of the department.
